

Bank Sohar supports IAES and WREN Conference

Bank Sohar recently lent support to the Sohar University when they organized the third International Conference on Industrial Applications of Energy Systems (IAES'09) and the World Renewable Energy Network Regional Conference (WREN) on the University campus.

The aim of the Conference was to attract the interest of specialists, academicians and researchers from the international community working in research areas related to Power and Energy Systems. The IAES '09 and WREN Conference allow the scientific community in Oman, the Middle East and around the world to exchange research and educational ideas and experience. The conference programme was chaired by international scholars and focused on many applications of power and energy systems.

“As bankers to the community in Oman we are keenly interested in events that have a bearing on our future as citizens. With our involvement in the energy sector, we felt that it was important to be present at a conference that was discussing energy systems, technologies and applications, energy industries and energy and sustainable development,” said Khalfan Rashid Al Taley DGM Retail Banking “As a bank we are sensitive to the developments that are taking place all over the world and are keen to contribute to the efforts being made to work for a better and healthier universe.”
